Attendance Rules

Fictional university knowledge-base document for AI/RAG chatbot testing.

Minimum Attendance

- A minimum attendance of 75 percent in each course is required for regular end-semester examination eligibility, subject to approved university exemptions.
- Attendance is calculated from classes conducted and classes attended.
- Students should regularly monitor attendance on the student portal.

Leave

- Students requiring leave should inform the concerned department according to the applicable procedure.
- Medical leave requests should include supporting medical documents.
- Approval of leave does not automatically guarantee exemption from attendance requirements.

Attendance Shortage

- Students below the required attendance threshold may face examination eligibility restrictions.
- Shortage cases are reviewed according to university rules and approved exemption provisions.
- Students should contact their department before the examination period if attendance is approaching the minimum limit.

Common Questions

- What is the minimum attendance? 75 percent per course for regular examination eligibility.
- Where can I check attendance? On the student portal.
- Can medical leave help with attendance? Approved medical leave may be considered under university rules with supporting documents.
- What happens if attendance is short? The student may face examination eligibility restrictions.
